Murray has been entertaining me for an hour with all the particulars of the family, & he has made me laugh & cry alternately at describing your behaviour at parting with him. — He says among other things —

"Mar - acted just so as she used to when you went away."

Happy will I be — when my fate will permit me to comfort & console you for every pang you feel. — Remember my dearest wife — that the sacrifice you make is for the benefit of your child —

Morris has received a letter from his father by which he is gratified at finding that the old gentleman not only consents to his coming to England but urges it. of course he'll be off the first good opportunity.
