

The General has received a letter from the Treasury (via Boston) authorising him to draw bills at a premium of $2\frac{1}{2}$ per Cent - and he means to draw immediately for fifteen thousand pounds.

Mr. Watson is using all his influence to obtain for Mr. Bingley the appointment of Comptroller at this place and it was supposed ~~he would~~ his application would be successful. Who do you think was his rival?

Andrew Finucane!

The Board of Accounts sit to-morrow, to make their final report respecting the reduction of the number and pay of the Clerks in the different departments.

Mr. President has remarked
 "That the Clerks in the public
 " offices may think themselves
 " well off if they are put on
 " the same pay as Ensigns
 " in the Army. That even
 " this is too much as nobody
 " conceives that they are on
 " a footing with Gentlemen."
