

"A sergeants pay he should
 "presume — But he wishes
 "to be generous — However he "must say there are many
 "honest Sergeants in the 33<sup>d</sup>
 "Regiment who can write
 "good hands, and would be
 "contented — nay — happy with
 "an extra shilling per day.
 "These people didn't know when "they were well — Three shillings
 "and six pence a day! — Why
 "Good God! 3/6 a day and
 "Rations, a Man must make "money — He can't help
 "it."

Had this Gentleman laid two thoughts together, he might have discovered, that there was some difference between a gilded provision for life; with prospects of promotion, and a temporary employment, subject to the breath of a Superior.
 His sagacity would possibly have led him a little further it might have taught him another difference, namely, that Clerks had something to do.
