

and Rouballet boasted that he had given them a hundred and ten dukes and dignified his supper with the tithe of A York Torch.

Capt. Addenbrooke has been confined a few days by a slight cacoe thru which was communicated to him by his sable Nigretta. He has however recovered, and I fancy think it not unlikely that his disorder was within the reach of birnstone.

Major Charles Wood
commanding the Royal Artillery has had the misfortune to be accused of stealing a sheep - and upon representation of his officers, a Board of Enquiry is to set in a few day's, to enquire into the nature and circumstances of the fact.
I don't recollect that any of the articles of war take notice of such a misdemeanor our.
